

The Curious Mortgage Broker

One person alone has the power to affect change. When that person invites others to collaborate for a deeper understanding of their purpose, the change then becomes more powerful.

Collaboration on a Global Scale – by Sue Solymosi

“My passion lies in human connection; connection that transcends the sovereignty of nations.”

UN Sustainable Development Goals

- No Poverty
- No Hunger
- Good Health
- Quality Education
- Gender Equality
- Clean Water and Sanitation
- Renewable Energy
- Good Jobs and Economic Growth
- Innovation and Infrastructure
- Reduced Inequalities
- Sustainable Cities and Communities
- Responsible Consumption
- Climate Action
- Life Below Water
- Life on Land
- Peace and Justice
- Partnerships for the Goals

I have been sitting on this blog for a while now, waiting for the right moment to launch, waiting to be moved into action by some external force. In other words, I needed inspiration...

This world, our world, this planet that we all call home... it's changing. It changes every single day, and now more than ever, that change has become exponential.

Outside of helping people with the mortgage process here in Canada, I have spent a large amount of my time working with an organization called Junior Chamber International (JCI). This is an international organization dedicated to creating positive, sustainable change in our world. Our core philosophies are to inspire confidence, unite communities, enhance equal opportunities, establish justice, embrace cultural diversity, and create sustainable impact.

Through collaborating with each other in JCI, working with other members, other Chapters, and other National Organizations around the globe, JCI members affect change that aligns with these core philosophies. JCI members empower each other to be better. JCI members are developing leaders for our changing world.

The key word, the magic ingredient, the philosophy on which I base my personal goals, is collaboration. Collaboration is a massive topic with a massive amount of heart.

“A world where we appreciate perspectives and learn from each other.”

As an organization, the United Nations has been around since 1945, following the mission of maintaining international peace and security, and the guiding principle of promoting and protecting human rights. The United Nations has provided us a sort of scaffolding upon which to base our goals and philosophies in JCI, through the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), set out to change the world in specific and measurable ways by the year 2030.

This has provided me with inspiration, and drives my passion to see a world where people work together more effectively because of their differences... not despite them. A world where we appreciate perspectives and learn from each other.

When governments of countries all over the world can come together and find common ground, when those countries can collaborate on ideas and solve problems together, then our world and our place in this world as global citizens becomes that much more meaningful.

What do I mean by meaningful? I mean that by providing the example of collaboration, our leaders give us the opportunity to have a safe space to innovate, to try new ideas and create positive and sustainable impact on our world, with the support of those around us.

Stay tuned as I dive into each SDG through this collaborative perspective.